

The Faculty of Education's Philosophy of Education

The Faculty of Education at Kagawa University trains teachers and educators who aim to contribute substantially to the world and to the field of education. In our rapidly changing modern world, it is extremely important for school educational systems to put an emphasis on subjects that support the self-realization of each child. There are social problems and challenges such as the rapidly declining birthrate and an ageing society, the development of an information-based society, environmental problems, and a multicultural society. These create new educational issues and the need for life-long education. We help teachers gain the practical skills and a broad education in order to deal flexibly with such issues in education.