

The philosophy for teacher training at the Graduate School of Education

The philosophy of the Graduate School of Education is to develop students' skills and professional knowledge within their fields of specialization. They will develop a strong sense of duty to the teaching profession, practical leadership skills, and technical knowledge that will allow them to overcome the various challenges in education. They will be capable of carrying out research into their areas of interest and will also be able to contribute to the community at the local, regional and international levels.
