

The philosophy for teacher training at the Graduate School of Education

The philosophy of the Graduate School of Education at Kagawa University is to develop students' skills and professional knowledge within their field of specialization. They will develop a strong sense of commitment to the teaching profession, practical leadership skills, and technical knowledge that will allow them to overcome the various challenges in education. They will be capable of carrying out research into their areas of interest and also able to contribute to the community at the local, regional and international levels.

The three policies of the Graduate School of Education Special Education Program